AL GORE When the action in Kosovo was dragging on and we were searching for a solution to the problem, our country had defeated the adversary on the battlefield without a single American life being lost in combat. But the dictator Milosevic was hanging on. I invited the former prime minister of Russia to my house and took a risk in asking him to get personally involved, along with the head of Finland, to go to Belgrade and to take a set of proposals from the United States that would constitute basically a surrender by Serbia. But it was a calculated risk that paid off. Now, I could probably give you some other examples of decisions over the last 24 years. I have been in public service for 24 years, Jim. And throughout all that time the people I have fought for have been the middle- class families, and I have been willing to stand up to powerful interests like the big insurance companies, the drug companies, the HMOs, the oil companies. They have good people and they play constructive roles sometimes, but sometimes they get too much power. I cast my lot with the people even when it means that you have to stand up to some powerful interests who are trying to turn the — the policies and the laws to their advantage. You can see it in this campaign. The big drug companies support Governor Bushs prescription drug proposal. They oppose mine because they dont want to get Medicare involved because theyre afraid that Medicare will negotiate lower prices for seniors who currently pay the highest prices of all.

MODERATOR Governor Bush?

GEORGE W. BUSH Ive been standing up to big Hollywood, big trial lawyers. Was â€œ“ what was the question? It was about emergencies, wasnt it?

MODERATOR It was about — okay.
